October 2024

IN MEMORIAM
VINCENT Royston Alfred

Mrs Vincent and family would like to express their grateful thanks to all those who attended the celebration of Roy's life following his passing on 23rd June, also for the generous donations to Prostate Cancer, the kind messages of condolence and the many cards received.

(Our sincere apologies for this not appearing in September's issue, an oversight on our part, which hopefully won't happen again.)

CONDOLENCES

Sincere condolences and sympathy go to Bron Warner and family on the death of Mel who passed away on September 2nd. Mel was a long standing member of the village. In the late 70s early 80s he was part of the Cratfield Community Council, a social and fundraising collective and until very recently he was a part of the team delivering the Cratfield News.

Also to Sheila Webster and family on the death of Tom who passed away on September 6th. Tom was another long standing member of the community and staunch supporter of the village and St. Mary's church.

PILATES

Concerts at Cratfield – thank you for another great season

Concerts at Cratfield 2024 closed on September 8th with a mesmerising performance by the acclaimed Heath Quartet and a last minute substitute – young Dutch violinist Charlotte Spruit who won 1st prize at the Leipzig International JS Bach competition and is a Classic FM Rising Star. Charlotte is at The Wigmore Hall in October – a fantastic example of the calibre of musicians that love to come to play in Cratfield each year.

We're often asked how we persuade artists to come – the answer being that the reputation of the series, the setting, the welcome and attentive audience mean they increasingly approach us. And what a feast of music we've had: violinist Fenella Humphreys and pianist Martin Roscoe stepping in after Jennifer Pike fractured her wrist; the brilliant Jeneba Kanneh-Mason playing just weeks after being signed up by Sony Classical; the joyous young musicians of the Meliora septet who we think broke the record for numbers on stage; pianist Mishka Rushdie Momen and cellist Tim Posner who dashed to Suffolk from performing in Italy; and the great Fitzwilliam Quartet, whose founding member was a personal friend of Shostakovich.

After bouncing back in 2023, this year was even stronger: full price seats sold out for every concert, and four of the six sold out completely. We were excited to see many people discovering Cratfield for the first time, which gives us real confidence for the future.

The Fitzwilliams told us St Mary's was one of the best venues they had ever played in. That reflects the welcome and active support of so many in the village without whom we couldn't continue and thrive. It's hard to know where to start, but I particularly want to thank Lottie Ackerley who took over as our brilliant and unflappable concert manager; Mr & Mrs Sillett who so generously allow us use of their field for parking; and of course the ever amazing and resourceful Tea Team, who keep the whole season refreshed and happy, and raise so much for the upkeep of the church.

We're back on Sunday July 6th to Sunday September 14th 2025 with another amazing line-up – and we're planning some Young Artists concerts in the spring. Look out for details in Cratfield News and on our website www.concertsatcratfield.org where you can see great photos of the 2024 season.

Suffolk Historic Churches Ride and Stride 2024

We were riding this year in memory of the much-loved Don Peacock, such a huge supporter of Cratfield church and its fabric. Don was always a generous sponsor and after the event he would summon the riders into his study to hear a report of the churches visited and get a few clues about where he should go to paint (the room was full of his water-colour paintings of local churches - some of them still drying.) The crowd at the pop-up pub the week before did him proud and we collected more support than ever - some even daringly challenging the 'pounds per church' column. After the baking temperatures of 2023, conditions this year were almost perfect - light winds and sunshine. There were at least 3 riders going for Cratfield. The Scoones contingent (fancy carbon fibre bike and lycra) decided a loop that started and finished at the Victoria in Earl Soham would be a good idea. A route that took in 22 hitherto unvisited churches (and 2 unopened chapels) plus one visited before but not open during COVID (Hoo) and one revisited just because it is so special (Crowfield) and passing through wonderfully named places such as Dallinghoo, Swilland and Pettaugh. Favourites: Creetingham, Bredfield and Grundisburgh (village and church). But as usual the welcoming faces, home-made cakes and cherished buildings made another special day in the Suffolk countryside visiting all the churches. Back in Earl Soham I put the bike in the back of my car, finished a beer and headed for home. Along Cake Street I encountered fellow rider, the intrepid Andy Edmonds and his vintage Raleigh 'taking a breather'. He was going to finish the ride whatever. But after much persuasion he added his bike to mine and we celebrated our absent friend with another beer in the Low House. Over £600 raised and counting: you did him proud indeed.... With the usual thanks to fellow cyclists and fund-raisers, sponsors and those who give their time to welcome visitors to the church.

Bonfires

It's that time of year when gardens need tidying and general rubbish disposed off, but please bear in mind the smoke generated. A few people in the village have recently been concerned with the health issues involved with smoke inhalation. The following has been sent in for guidance.....

Important issues about bonfires! Whilst it's not quite 'Remember, Remember the Fifth of November' time yet....most of us are aware of the need to consider neighbouring properties when planning a bonfire at any time of the year.. There are, however, certain items which it is illegal to burn! The following extracts from a Gov.UK website explain this in greater detail:

- * It is illegal to burn most types of waste and setting fire to treated wood, tyres, plastics, rubber and oil can seriously harm health and pollute the environment.
- * Any material for the bonfire should be clean, non-commercial waste and only small amount of untreated wood, paper, leaves and cardboard should be used.
- * It may be tempting to burn old bits of furniture, mattresses and household rubbish, but the toxic fumes given off from burning certain types of material can cause pollution and damage people's health.
- * When choosing the site for the bonfire, make sure the fire or smoke from the fire will not affect any houses, buildings or roads which could become a danger to public safety.

If anyone sees any suspicious activities, they should contact the Environment Agency incident line on 0800 807060 or report it anonymously to Crimestoppers on 0800 555111

for further information see the Environment Agency advice on GOV.UK <https://www.gov.uk/browse/environment-countryside/recycling-waste-management> to check the disposal of waste on bonfires is both safe and legal.*

All in a Day's Work

After our stopover in Mayport, we went off to carry out trials with a couple of UK submarines at the AUTE¹ range in the Bahamas. This range is situated in the Tongue of the Ocean, a vast and very deep inlet in the Bahamas, in between coral reefs. It is 150 miles long, 20 miles wide and up to 6,500 feet deep, giving submarines many miles of water in which to play. The water is still and very quiet – ideal conditions for underwater trials and measurements. These are monitored from Andros Island on the west side of the Tongue. However, as I pointed out in a very early tale in the Cratmag some five years ago, the biggest disruptor of life is always “events.”²

Ark Royal was to spend several days there, accompanied by the frigate HMS Cleopatra with her Lynx ASW helicopter, whilst trials were carried out with homing torpedoes against both a conventional submarine (HMS/M Oracle) and a nuclear submarine - I cannot remember which one - using Stingray torpedoes dropped by Ark Royal's Sea King ASW helicopters and Cleo's Lynx, and the much heavier Spearfish torpedo used by the submarines against surface vessels and other submarines. The aim was to test and improve the accuracy of these homing torpedoes against submarines. Of course, the torpedoes used for the trial had no warheads, were set to pass just below the target and on activation of the fuse would rise to the surface for recovery.

On the Sunday, I handed over Ark Royal to my second in command (but retained command of the whole group) and flew ashore to the range monitoring facility to watch the trials and to spend a night there, where two old friends of mine were part of the trials team. It was a lovely Caribbean late November “sea and sun” day, and all was proceeding nicely when we got a message from the nuclear submarine that its conning tower had been hit by a torpedo (it later turned out that the wrong depth had been set on the fuse, but at least we knew that its homing mechanism worked!). We were dealing with this and any possible damage when I received a message from her Captain that Oracle (with diesel electric drive) had discovered a “full earth.” In simple terms this meant that the submarine could not safely dive and could only proceed slowly on the surface; she needed urgent repair. The nearest naval base was Port Canaveral in Florida, near the NASA space station. It was over two days away, so I decided to send Oracle there and detached Cleopatra to shepherd her en route; there was always a chance that things might deteriorate before she got there. Her absence would have some impact on the trials, but I told Cleo to transfer her helicopter to Ark Royal, so at least it could continue the Lynx trials.

Naturally, all this involved a number of signals and telephone conversations, between our ships as well as to UK and the USN base to make the necessary arrangements.³ I was not a submariner and I had only tactical command of the submarine, not full command, so I was exceeding my delegated authority. I thought I had better try to telephone the Flag Officer Submarines, doubtless enjoying a post Sunday lunch doze in Portsmouth, tell him what I had done with his boats⁴ and get his post factum approval. Once awake he was happy with it, thanked me and endorsed my decisions. When I suggested (jokingly?) that I might receive a day of submarine special service pay, he was a bit less enthusiastic and pointed out (in a friendly enough way) that he had done a long and demanding training to earn his submarine pay, although he might buy me a drink next time we met!

It was a rather hectic Sunday, but very interesting and I learned a lot during it. However, I was ready for a sundowner or two, and a nicely cooked Abalone in a creekside restaurant in Andros. I admit that I was a little peeked when I returned on board Ark Royal the next day to be asked by my second in command if I had enjoyed my weekend holiday in Andros whilst he kept my ship at sea safe and sound, although of course he had enjoyed his temporary spell in command, which he certainly deserved.

Jeremy Blackham

1. The Atlantic Underwater Test and Evaluation Centre – a USN laboratory regularly used by the UN.
2. Harold MacMillan, when Prime Minister, was asked “What is the greatest challenge to Governments?” He replied, “Events dear boy, events.”
3. I should say that it was a joy, and much quicker, to make these decisions when my own boss and his staff were 3000 miles away and on weekend!
4. RN Submarines are always known as “boats”, and in Germany too as “Unterseebooten.”

Framlingham, Wickham Market, Kelsale and Yoxford and Villages Community Partnership Area Rural Wellbeing Survey

What is the reason for this more in-depth survey?

This survey is a follow on from a previous small survey undertaken by East Suffolk Council into any health and well-being issues that potentially exist in the Framlingham, Wickham Market, Kelsale and Yoxford and Villages Community Partnership area.

Community Action Suffolk, on behalf of East Suffolk Council, are now conducting a deeper exploration of all those reported challenges and barriers, as well as finding out more about possible solutions. We want to learn more about what they are and how they affect people living locally, together with gathering their ideas and suggested solutions that could help improve things for everyone.

We are speaking directly with local organisations, groups and residents, both through this survey and in-person. We will be providing a full report to East Suffolk Council, presenting our findings on a village-by-village basis so that they can have better understanding about health and well-being needs and provisions in the area, and hear how they can work with you to improve things. Thank you for sharing your views, experiences and opinions with us.

To complete the survey please go to <https://www.surveymonkey.com/r/RuralWellbeing>

Exploring the Scottish Islands – with a collapsible bike!
St Kilda (Population: 0 – last inhabitants evacuated in 1930)
Part 12 – Final Experiences of St Kilda

Recap: After my gut-churning voyage to St Kilda on the MV Cuma, the 3 days I spent there were sun-drenched: a far cry from the foul and merciless winter weather that the island endures each year. I had befriended the last work-party of the season and enjoyed a drunken evening in the Puff Inn!

The next day, there was much excitement, because the Rainbow Warrior drew into Village Bay, complete with celebrity on board in the form of Julia Sawalha ('Saffy' from Ab Fab). That night, in the Puff Inn, she had numerous photos taken of her pulling pints! But the following day, a Royal Navy boat silently crept in and, suddenly, rather ominous looking pairs of men were seen, dressed in navy blue from top to bottom, walking around the island. The Rainbow Warrior was being trailed, it seemed, and the demeanour of the dark blue men seemed slightly threatening, for they exchanged no pleasantries (as if to say, "We're watching you, you bunch of weirdos!"). I passed a pair of RN men in the village 'street' and, to counter whatever impression they had of me, in my best, over-confident London-commuter accent, I said, loudly, "Morning!" Without a word, they almost barged me out of the way! A rather unexpected dark mood had descended on St Kilda.

However, Murdo (Captain of the Cuma) cheered everyone up by passing around the message that, in light of the good weather, he was offering a sailing trip around Hirta and its close neighbour, Soay ('Sheep island'). The work-party, some Rainbow Warriors, me, and anyone else who was interested crammed onto the Cuma and we enjoyed a wonderful, leisurely trip, in bright sunshine, around the dramatic islands. As with the bizarre crossing I made between Colonsay and Oronsay as a pedestrian in bare feet, so again, on St Kilda, a diverse group of strangers shared stories, had a laugh, and bonded. It didn't matter what anybody's name was: we just knew we all had something in common, and that was a love for islands.

The work-party had bonded so well, in fact, that they decided to go, as a group, on successive island holidays in future years; and I was invited too. We holidayed on Canna (meeting the eccentric, but wonderful, Margaret Fay Shaw (the American lady who discovered the islands as a teenager and amassed a (now) world-important collection of the vanishing Gaelic music and literature)) and also Colonsay, where the laird visited to repair our cooker causing all the ladies to fall in love amid much face-fanning and swooning! (Thereafter the group holidays petered out when the chief organiser fell pregnant!)

So many happy memories... but when I got back home to edit my film, I found that my lapel mic had broken and I had lost all my soundtrack on St Kilda. I had to start the painstaking work of re-working all the commentary (trying to sound spontaneous!) and adding music where I thought appropriate. I contacted Eric (who drew up the order form) and explained that it would take some time before everyone received their video tape. They had only just returned from their 2 week work-party stint, but Eric sounded sombre, not his usual self. "Remember Kris, the Belgian journalist fellow?" he said. (I instantly remembered him, for he was unmistakable in his black Goth/Punk fashion-sense.) "The day after you left St Kilda, he went for a walk and, being the rebel that he was, he crossed over a roped off area and carried on walking. He didn't return. We took a boat out in the morning and found his body at the bottom of the cliffs."

St Kilda had claimed yet another young life, albeit the first one since the evacuation in 1930. Just as the original islanders had had to endure, an innocent day, full of happiness, had ended in tragedy. I end with further images of old St Kilda...

Mary Gillies: her death at 21, from acute appendicitis, was the final straw for the islanders.

The girls and ladies were distinctive for their centre partings

The St. Kildan ladies were never far from their knitting and weaving.

Letter from the Vicar October 2024

I was lucky enough to join other folk from across our benefice at the 'Leading Your Church in Growth' (LYCiG) conference that was held at the Sports Centre in Debenham during the first weekend of July this year. It certainly provided food for thought and highlighted the need once again for us not to only look to what are congregations may prefer in church but also to find out what we could do in terms of developing our church communities for those who chose not to attend Sunday services.

I know, I was banging on about surveys the other month and perhaps now might be a good time to explore such an initiative further? Perhaps we might begin to look at what might be on our stall in the New Year? After all, we only need to reflect upon Moses' journey in the Old Testament to realise how God uses ordinary people like us. Eugene H. Petersen, Professor Emeritus of Spiritual Theology in British Columbia and the translator of 'The Message' (a paraphrase of the Bible), once spoke of how he had observed a kingfisher diving in and out of the water to catch a fish and it took about 37 attempts to be successful. He observed that it was rather like being a pastor/priest when you may make 37 contacts with a person before they may come to the Lord, so let's get fishing!

And it would be remiss of me not to wish Reverend Enid Pow amazing success in her new role as the incumbent at Walton and Trimley and to say thank you for all that she shared in the Four Rivers benefice.

God bless, Reverend Chrissie

Come and join in decorating the Church in readiness for the Harvest Supper and Harvest Festival.

Once again there will be a joint effort for decorating the church to celebrate harvest. This will coincide with the Harvest supper on October 5th and Harvest Festival on October 6th.

If you are new to the village our flower arranging team will be pleased to include you in "doing a window" or if that sounds a bit ambitious for you there are plenty of other ways you can help - decorating one of the wands in the isle is a great way to get involved - young or old. and only takes a few minutes and really adds to the overall effect.

We will be there from 10.00 until 12 on Saturday 5th October to give you some guidance if you are new or haven't been involved before. Tools and materials will be on hand for the wand dressing or you might like to bring some flowers and produce from your garden.
